

To view this email as a web page, go here.

Yale

Graduate School of Arts and Sciences

March 15, 2020

Dear graduate students,

Many of you will have planned to submit your dissertation tomorrow, Monday, March 16th. We very much hope that many of you will be able to do so without difficulty. But we also understand that in light of the current situation with Covid-19, some of you may experience delays and difficulties in getting your completed manuscripts to the University Registrar's Office in a timely fashion.

For this reason, we are extending the submission deadline to Friday, March, 20th. We hope this extension will give you sufficient time to overcome whatever obstacles you are encountering.

Despite the crisis in which we now find ourselves, please pause to enjoy your success. Completing a dissertation is a momentous professional milestone. Congratulations!

Lynn Cooley

Dean, Graduate School of Arts and Sciences

C.N.H. Long Professor of Genetics

Professor of Cell Biology and of Molecular, Cellular & Developmental Biology

Copyright © 2020 Yale University • All rights reserved
Graduate School of Arts and Sciences

Update Your Preferences Privacy Policy